CU Ready

Disaster can strike at any time. When a natural or other disaster strikes, life suddenly changes. Routines are shattered, jobs are disrupted, and property may be destroyed. However, disaster preparedness readies us for the unexpected, and it allows for a more organized, timely, and efficient response when disaster strikes.

Making sure that MedEd Credit Union is prepared for emergency situations is vital to our employee's safety and our member's economic security. The following information is provided for our members as a quick reference for pre-planning and emergency communications.

Limiting Cash During a Disaster

MedEd Credit Union may, at its discretion, limit the amount of cash disbursed to any account holder during a declared disaster, for the term of the disaster. This limit pertains to less-cash deposits, check cashing, credit card advances and other types of transactions wherein the account holder requests cash. The credit union will likely limit the amount of cash disbursed to any account holder during a declared disaster to no more than what the account holder may withdraw from an ATM during a twenty-four (24) hour period during normal circumstances.

Advantages of Direct Deposit/Payment

In times of disaster, the significance of Direct Deposit and Direct Payment looms large. Whether an individual takes temporary shelter in another town or families relocate their entire lives, their financial stability can be maintained when their paychecks or government or retirement benefit payments are directly deposited.
